Re: Ex Parte Letter – Amendment of Part 90 of the Commission's Rules, WP Docket No. 07-100

The 4.9 GHz band is currently used by public-safety agencies for critical communications across all U.S. states. Today, there are 3,715 licenses in the 4.9 GHz band. Licensees in the band are charged with advancing and protecting public safety across the nation, and they use their systems to protect local communities and save lives. These systems would be put at risk by any plan to transfer the 4.9 GHz band from local public safety to the FirstNet Authority and hence to AT&T for national use, shared between the company's commercial and public-safety subscribers. The Coalition for Emergency Response and Critical Infrastructure ("CERCI") attaches a list of the 4.9 GHz band licensees, organized by state, showing that 25 states have 50 or more licenses, and that at least 10 licenses are held in all but three states, three U.S. territories, and Washington, D.C.

The Federal Communications Commission ("FCC" or "Commission") itself has yet to begin the analysis to determine the scope of current public-safety use of the band that it announced in its January 2023 4.9 GHz Order ("Order"), ¹ and which is required to create the fact base for any regulatory action. In that Order, which is in effect today, the FCC adopted a framework to collect "more granular data on 4.9 GHz operations" to "improve interference mitigation efforts and bolster public safety confidence in the band." The Order directed FCC staff to enhance the Universal Licensing System ("ULS") database to collect information on licensed 4.9 GHz operations for both incumbent licensees and future applicants³ and announced that the FCC would issue a Public Notice "when ULS is prepared to accept the more granular data on public safety operations in the 4.9 GHz band."⁴ No such Notice has been issued.

Similarly, the Commission has not provided any description for how it will decide which communities must give up local public-safety agencies' rights to the 4.9 GHz band.⁵ Indeed, neither the Public Safety Spectrum Alliance ("PSSA") nor AT&T have provided any explanation of how their plan to deploy the 4.9 GHz band on AT&T's network will in fact "protect[] incumbent licensee operations." They also do not explain how their plan would ensure that AT&T's subscribers – FirstNet and commercial – would avoid causing interference to the thousands of public safety co-channel licensees across the nation.

The FCC cannot convert the 4.9 GHz band into an AT&T FirstNet/commercial shared band premised on vague promises of interference protection for all current public-safety licensees. Rather, it must first conduct the data collection it announced over a year-and-a-half ago, which is presumably a prerequisite for the Commission to ensure adequate, enforceable, and lasting protection for the incumbent licensees that have invested in 4.9 GHz-based deployments to support essential public-safety services, many of which are not even offered under AT&T's FirstNet brand. CERCI respectfully submits that if the Commission were to conduct the data collection it promised in its 2023 Order it would conclude that it is not in the public interest to deploy the 4.9 GHz band on AT&T's network.

⁵ PSSA Ex Parte, FCC, WP Docket No. 07-100, at 4 (Apr. 23, 2024) ("PSSA April 23 Ex Parte") (arguing that "incumbent licensees [must] surrender spectrum they are not using").

⁶ AT&T Ex Parte, FCC, WP Docket No. 07-100, at 1 (June 20, 2024) ("AT&T June 20 Ex Parte"); see also PSSA April 23 Ex Parte at 4.

The numerous current public-safety licensees in the 4.9 GHz band – and the public they serve – deserve a detailed explanation from the Commission, the FirstNet Authority, and AT&T as to how they propose to protect existing public-safety systems.

Sincerely,

The Coalition for Emergency Response and Critical Infrastructure ("CERCI")
